LaCie has released a pair of wireless high-definition media players aimed at allowing users to access and play content from their HD televisions.

The LaCinema Black Play and LaCinema Black Record can store music, movies, and photos from any computer on the local network, whether through a direct network connection or built-in Wi-Fi. Both the Play and Record are capable of decoding 1080p-resolution movies, HD JPEG photos, and 1080i upscaling of standard definition movies. An optical audio output allows for surround sound.

The Black Record device also features digital video recorder technology for recording and replaying TV shows with the support of a set-top box or cable converter.

Designed by Neil Poulton, the Play and Record both come in 500GB and 1TB capacities. Pricing starts at US$430, according to LaCie.--Philip Michaels

Interface changes highlight Mac Notepad 7 release

Mac Notepad reached version 7 Wednesday, adding a number of changes to Apimac's text organizer.

Mac Notepad lets you save and organize any piece of text, paste it, drag it, drop it, or write it yourself.

The new release features user interface improvements, a new mail note feature, a new categories source list and support for multiple selections of notes. The app has added new formats to export and import notes--styles include plain text, styled text, RTF, HTML, Open Office, Word, Word XML and Word 97-2004.

Mac Notepad 7.0 runs on Mac OS X 10.4 and later. A single-user license costs $25.--Peter Cohen
